JUDGE RUMMY in "A FITTING GIFT."

Judge Rummy, trying to get on the good side of his wife, goes with Silk Hat Harry to buy her a pair of corsets for her birthday. The Judge takes his life in his hand and goes into the store alone, leaving Harry on the sidewalk. The three hundred pound clerk takes Rummy's nerve and he runs out without asking for what he wanted.

Harry then takes things into his own hands and walks boldly into the store. He goes right up to the clerk and asks to see something in corsets, whereupon the clerk disrobes and displays the latest self-lacing style. This is too much for Harry, and he flees.

Then they disguise themselves as women and both try, but when the clerk asks for the size, they are "stuck" again. Rummy cannot think of any number that could possibly be a big enough size for his wife. The clerk, supposing that Rummy wants the corsets for himself, gives him a pair to try on.

Just as he gets them on, his wife comes in, and in his haste to hide, he drops his hand bag. Harry comes forward to claim it, but the judge's wife, who had picked it up, looks inside and sees Rummy's card. All she does is to beat up Harry. Rummy then tries to escape, but Mrs Rummy is on the alert, and catches him after a hard chase.

He presents her with the corsets he had been trying on. She apologizes for suspecting him and immediately tries to put them around herself, but they look like a postage stamp on her back.

LAMPOONS

A series of clever sayings, gibes, jests, and jokes .
